Alzheimer's Disease International

Alzheimer's Disease International believes that the key to winning the fight against dementia lies in a combination of global solutions and local knowledge. As such, it works locally, by empowering Alzheimer associations to promote and offer care and support for people with dementia and their carers, while working globally to focus attention on dementia.

ADI is the international federation of over 80 Alzheimer associations around the world, in official relations with the World Health Organization. Each member is the Alzheimer association in their country who support people with dementia and their families. The board is composed of people from around the world, with a staff team based in London.

ADI's vision is an improved quality of life for people with dementia and their families throughout the world.

Website: http://www.alz.co.uk/

Source URL: https://ncdalliance.org/alzheimers-disease-international

Links
[1] http://www.alz.co.uk/