PRESS RELEASE

Tuesday 13 July 2021, Geneva (Switzerland) – 19 NCD alliances from Africa, Asia, Europe, Eastern Mediterranean and Latin America and the Caribbean will be awarded grants to accelerate the response to the COVID-19 pandemic through the second phase of the Civil Society Solidarity Fund on Noncommunicable Diseases (NCDs) and COVID-19 in 2021. The winners were announced today by the NCD Alliance. The 2021 Solidarity Fund totals $335,000 and competitively awards grants of up to US$15,000.

Anne Lise Ryel, President of the NCD Alliance, said: “The COVID-19 pandemic has placed many challenges on NCD civil society, including financial sustainability. It is key to support alliances to ensure a vibrant and strong NCD civil society that can elevate the voices of communities and people living with NCDs and enable them to mobilise resources, advocate for political action and health policy reform, and hold governments and other stakeholders to account. The 2021 Solidarity Fund aims to do this.”

People living with NCDs have been at the epicentre of the pandemic since it began, due to their heightened vulnerability to severe symptoms or death from COVID-19 as well as to the health system disruptions experienced in most countries around the world. This means that the need for NCD action and investment – and for advocacy and pressure by NCD civil society – has never been greater. COVID-19, however, has challenged the financial sustainability of NCD civil society, and the difficulties of adapting to a virtual context has stalled its advocacy efforts on the ground. The Solidarity Fund aims to address these challenges, supporting NCD civil society in continuing its important work as countries and health systems endeavour to rebuild better and fairer, leaving no one behind.

Building upon its successes and due to the continuation of COVID-19, we are now launching a second phase of this Solidarity Fund to make the case for prioritising and investing in NCDs within the context of an equitable COVID-19 response and recovery, advocating for the needs of people living with NCDs, with the aim of advancing towards Universal Health Coverage, and NCD prevention and control.”

The 2021 Solidarity Fund has been made possible thanks to generous financial contributions of NCD Alliance’s supporters: The Leona M. and Harry B. Helmsley Charitable Trust, Access Accelerated, AstraZeneca, ECOBANK Foundation and Viatrix.
